Hamas in Gaza must be chortling: Everything has been going its way

2. Hamas has proved once again that Israel is totally irrational when it comes to paying for hostages. It began with Gilad Shalit, a single soldier who Hamas kidnapped in 2006. Shalit was only released in 2011 after Israel agreed to release 1,027 Palestinian prisoners, over 500 of whom had blood on their hands. Among them was Yahya Sinwar, the architect of the October 7th massacre.

This time Hamas has had 241 hostages to bargain with. Consequently, it has released hostages over time, obtaining substantial payment each time. Even so, Hamas still holds roughly 20 live hostages.

3. Hamas has watched Israel tear itself apart. In the past when the State of Israel was attacked, Israelis have set aside their political differences and, together, won the war. Not so this time. Ever since the present war in Gaza began, there has been an element of Israeli society which has emphatically chanted "bring them home NOW!" That was the chant when Hamas held 241 hostages. It is the same chant now, when there are only 20 live hostages left. Moreover, as the number of hostages has gone down, the number of "bring them home" people has increased exponentially. Recently in Tel Aviv a crowd of over 200,000 people demanded that the remaining hostages be brought home now, no matter what the cost. These people are a very vocal minority, but have been able to exert enormous pressure on politicians who disagree with them.

Israel is being torn apart this time in a second way. By far the most important political issue to the fast-growing Haredim is that their members should be exempt from serving in the IDF. It matters little to them that Jews have been fighting with the sword to protect themselves since Biblical times when, according to Torah, Joshua defeated Amalek by the "sword" Exodus 17:13. Nor does it matter to them that during World War II, the greatest Jewish heroes were the ones who gave their lives fighting in the Warsaw ghetto. In the past, virtually all Israelis of age set aside their political differences and banded together to fight Israel's enemies. The ultrareligious and secular often died side by side. Not so anymore.

4. Hamas has made the IDF look pathetic. Gaza is tiny; it is only 25 miles long. In the 1967 war, which only lasted for six days, the IDF conquered Gaza quickly, even though it was being defended by an entire Egyptian army division comprised of 100,000 soldiers and 1,000 tanks. This time, thanks to Hamas, Israel has failed to gain control of Gaza despite trying to do so for almost two years.

SMART171

5. Israel is getting clobbered by the international community. There are a number of reasons for this. First, Hamas is MUCH better at working the international press than Israel is. See, https://blogs.timesofisrael.com/why-israel-is-getting-clobbered-in-the-foreign-press/. Because Israel's actions are so unpopular, 27 of the 30 members of the European Union recognize a State of Palestine. Recently, four more countries, France, The United Kingdom, Australia, and Canada have threatened to recognize a Palestinian state unless, by September 25th, Israel begins negotiations with Palestine. (This one is particularly mystifying to me. Israel has enough to worry about negotiating with Hamas in the hope of ending the war in Gaza, much else opening negotiations with the Palestinian Authority.) Indeed, Israel will never have peace until it makes peace with Iran. Since the Ayatollahs, who control Iran, believe, as a matter of religion, that Allah promised Muslims all the land between the Jordan River and the Mediterranean Sea, peace between Israel and Iran is very unlikely to take place in anything like the near future.

Second, the longer Hamas in Gaza can draw the war out, the more international pressure will be put on Israel. Hamas does not care if Gaza is destroyed, nor does it worry about how many Gazans get killed. Indeed, it inflates the numbers of people Israel has killed in the war in Gaza and refuses to differentiate between Gazan civilians and Hamas members whom Israel has killed. By exaggerating the number of Gazans killed in the war, Hamas is able to and does say over and over again "Israel did this" so that the world will turn against Israel more and more. So far, this has worked to Hamas' enormous advantage.

As one who lives in Tel Aviv, and has spent hours and hours in my safe room (mamad) listening to Iron Dome intercepting Hamas missiles being fired at me, every one of which is a war crime, I can only think how sad this is.

SMART171

This is what Hamas won in this war:

1. It turned world opinion against Israel.

2. It has negotiated the release of hundreds of Palestinian prisoners, many of whom have been sentenced to life terms.

2. While some of its leaders were killed, they will be replaced with new ones.

3. While many of its fighters were killed, according press reports, Hamas has been rebuilding its fighting wing, which now has 12,000 soldiers in Gaza.

4. Hamas has proved that Israel is willing to give up huge amounts to get a small amount in return.

5. Hamas gets to claim proudly that the October 7, 2023 massacre brought about terrific results. In fact, Israel is weaker now than it was on October 6, 2023.

6. It really pays to take hostages.

SMART171

7. While much of Gaza has been destroyed, the world is about to provide huge sums in order to rebuild it. One can expect that a significant amount of these sums will indirectly wind up in Hamas' coffers.

8. Hamas will still control Gaza. UNRWA will remain as it has been.

9. The war has created a serious rift between Israel and the United States.

10. Initially, Hamas will only have to release three hostages. It will have to release 4 more hostages shortly after that. During phase one of the deal, only a total of 33 hostages will be released. Israel may trade more Palestinian prisoners being held by Hamas for more hostages after that. Thus, at the end of phase one of the deal, Hamas will be able to continue to hold roughly 30 hostages, some of whom may already be dead.

10. Israel has failed in its objectives as stated at the beginning of the war, which included the total elimination of Hamas in Gaza.

11. It pays to commit war crimes, including not only the war crimes that Hamas committed during the October 7th massacre, but by firing thousands of missiles into Israel, every one of them a war crime.

THE TIMES OF ISRAEL

THE BLOGS
David K. Rees

12. The cost to Israel of this war has been enormous. Not only has Hamas been able to kill over 400 Israeli soldiers in Gaza since the October 7th massacre, but Israel's national debt has increased substantially and its economy has been hurt as well. It has been estimated that Israel's economic activity has been reduced over 20% by the war.
13. While Israel will get some respite from Hamas forces in Gaza, it still has the remaining parts of Iran's axis of resistance, including the Houthis and Hamas on the West Bank, and Iran, to deal with.
14. Israel will begin to to withdraw its troops from Gaza and, for now, the killing will cease.

SMART171

What Israel has obtained that it did NOT have on October 6, 2023.

1. Almost nothing.

The deal has three phases. Apparently, the terms of phase one have been agreed to. Phases two and three require additional negotiations. Hamas could refuse to negotiate reasonable conditions during these phases, making sure that it does not give anything more to Israel. Not all of the hostages will have been released. Hamas will still be able to rebuild its system of tunnels of which roughly 40% still remain.

This is not the first time that Hamas and Israel have fought wars and an agreement was reached. Every time Hamas has broken its word and started yet another war. This happened most recently in 2021. Since then it has allowed Qatar to bring millions of dollars in aid to it in return for peace. In fact, during the following two years, Hamas built its complicated system of tunnels and thousands of missiles while preparing for the October 7th massacre. There is no reason to believe that Hamas will NOT break its word and attack Israel from Gaza again.

Israeli army database suggests at least 83% of Gaza dead were civilians
Classified intelligence from May reveals Israel believed it had killed some 8,900 militants in its attacks on Gaza, indicating a proportion of civilian slaughter with few parallels in modern warfare, a joint investigation finds.

https://www.972mag.com/israeli-intelligence-database-83-percent-civilians-militants/

By Yuval Abraham | August 21, 2025

In partnership with LOCAL CALL שיחה מקומית

Data from an internal Israeli intelligence database indicates that at least 83 percent of Palestinians killed in Israel's onslaught on Gaza were civilians, an investigation by +972 Magazine, Local Call, and the Guardian can reveal.

Figures obtained from the classified database — which records the deaths of militants from Hamas and Palestinian Islamic Jihad (PIJ) — contradict by a huge margin the public statements of Israeli army and government officials throughout the war, which have generally claimed a 1:1 or 2:1 ratio of civilian to militant casualties. Instead, the classified data backs up the findings of several studies suggesting Israel's bombardment of Gaza has killed civilians at a rate with few parallels in modern warfare.

The Israeli army confirmed the existence of the database, which is managed by the Military Intelligence Directorate (known by the Hebrew acronym "Aman"). Multiple intelligence sources familiar with the database said the army views it as the only authoritative tally of militant casualty figures. In the words of one of them: "There's no other place to check."

SMART171

According to the data, which was obtained in May of this year, the Israeli army believed it had killed around 8,900 operatives since October 7 — the deaths of 7,330 of whom were considered certain and 1,570 recorded as "probably dead."

The vast majority of them were junior, with the army suspecting it had killed 100-300 senior Hamas operatives out of a total of 750 named in the database.
